Jiashu is a senior student from University of California, Los Angeles majoring in Applied Math and Statistics, who worked as a data analyst intern at Sony Pictures in LA past summer. He is a positive and hard-working young professional and he has experience in business analytics, data management & visualization, coding and product management. Having opportunities worked both in industries and research labs makes Jiashu a gifted and talented person with strong technical skills (SQL, R, Python, C++, Excel etc.), as well excellent interpersonal and problem-solving skills to become a great team member while leverage different types of business problems.